Chit-Chat on the Festivals.

The appreciative audiences that thronged the Armory at the Portland Musical Festival would have been roused to even greater wonder if they could have realized that in Bangor a larger building was filled to "standing-room" capacity with an audience just as keenly appreciative and enthusiastic over artists and director, and just as proud of its chorists.

One sees but half of Mr. and Mrs. Chapman's work in Maine when at Bangor, or when in Portland. To this, add Manchester, Burlington and Ogdensburg! and strive to realize what New England owes to one man, with an ever-growing ideal. Nothing like this movement has been even started in any other country, wherein the masses have been permeated with such a stream of classical influence.

The Festivals grow in grandeur and solidity every year. It is no longer a question: "Shall we have a Festival?" but "Whom shall we hear at the Festival?" It was a specially fortunate choice of artists this year. They were not only great artists, but desirable people to know; and one of the pleasant features of these Festivals is the feeling of kindly interest in the chorus and its friends shown by the artists. A wholly friendly sense of camaraderie seems to flow back and forth, so that when Campanari and Miles play singers' pranks upon one another at rehearsals there is a smiling recognition of the human nature behind these big voices. One feels glad to know, for instance, how devoted a husband is this prince of operatic tenors whose advent upon the stage causes such a storm of unappeased applause, and who is not only the adored of the matinee girl but as heartily admired by men. Campanari is the most universal of favorites; he says the Maine people are lovely, and he ought to know by this time.

Miles in oratorio was a revelation to even his admirers, and scored a great triumph. The dignity of the great work was manifested to a most gratifying degree in his renditions, and his grand voice was never more nobly used than as the instrument to interpret the thought in this masterpiece. We listened to him not the less reverently that he traveled from Bangor to New York and back to Maine to spend a Sunday with his family. One so likes to find the man behind the musician.

Mr. Willis Bacheller is a Maine production, and had great misgivings over the ancient receptions given to prophets in their own country, but he was assured that Maine people were a product of a higher civilization and had long ago learned that we honor ourselves when we honor our own.

His reception in both cities caused him to acknowledge this advancement. His pure, vibrating, yet steady tenor was most grateful in his trying position as narrator in the oratorios, and aroused the greatest enthusiasm in his arias. He, too, put a little halo around his head when he said that he chose a musical career that would separate him as little as possible from the lovely young wife, who stood beside him, proud of his success.

Miss Hirschman, the pianist, whose delicate physique is another proof that power does not depend upon brawn but brain, was remarkably well received, and behind the scenes was just a dainty girl, full of laughter and ready repartee.

Mme. Bouton was wholly new to Maine, but will certainly receive a recall, for no contralto has given greater pleasure. Her rich, smooth tones and delicate shadings gave one the feeling of an immenso reserve power—and her personality was charming. Her welcome back to Maine will be a warm one.

Jennie King Morrison is so well known as to need no least word of commendation. She is one of those whose success we feel sure whatever position she is asked to fill, and her role in the oratorio was most acceptable.

Miss Otten, the shy young violinist, with her prettily accented English will not soon be forgotten.

Madame Maconda is now quite claimed by Maine as "real own folks"—she has been so long a favorite. Many longed to hear her render one of the arias for which she is justly famous, but when in the oratorio her voice in the obligato soared above the volume of chorus and orchestra, no more brilliant effect could be desired.

Miss Shaw, the harpist, loves Bethel's and Brunswick's pine woods, in whose sighing aisles she wrote a lovely harp composition. What would she not write from Lucy Larcom's ledge!

Madame Suzanne Adams and her delightful husband, Mr. Leo Stein, himself an artist and composer, were new to Maine, but went away with a stateful of friends and admirers.

Madame Adams' voice and personality seem to belong together. Who can think of her tones and not see the finely moulded head upon which the heavy black hair was so naturally coiled, the mobile face and the figure so regal yet so womanly? One would almost know at first sight that she would be one to do just such a dear deed as all Bangor knows about. While there she had expressed a desire to be shown through the beautiful new Eastern hospital. One of the staff-doctors gladly did the honors to Mr. and Mrs. Stein. Upon leaving the wards she was so moved by the sight of suffering that she asked if she might bring a little of the Festival spirit within those walls, by singing to them the next day.

At the appointed hour, the great prima-donna was punctually there; the organ was rolled into the corridor; doctors, assistants, nurses, and servants gathered near; every door in the wards was opened, and to her husband's accompaniment, Madame Adams sang four songs, closing with "Home, Sweet Home," as Suzanne Adams sings it! After the recital was over, she visited each ward and spoke with every patient.

We thought we must know what it meant to the dwellers in those wards, but one among us in Bethel, who has been a "shut-in," says we never can know until we, too, have felt the prison walls of pain close round us. Suzanne Adams' glorious talent can never receive a nobler recognition.

Schumann-Heink came before her tumultuous audiences, knowing that she was the people's choice, and her largeness of nature showed in the very way she seemed to lavish her gifts upon her lovers. There was a merry, atmosphere about her comings in and goings off that infected the audience with true passion of love for this noble woman, who is not only one of the few great artists in the world, but also a wife and mother. A charming daughter was with her who guarded the precious song-bird's throat with carefully adjusted wraps, and was a picture of self-forgetful daughterly devotion.

There never was a voice that could fill great spaces with such sweet power as Schumann-Heink's. That mysterious velvety quality, the contralto richness that so touches the heart, veiled, yet so pure, vibrating, but absolutely steady. Nothing on earth can surpass her rendering of "But the Lord is mindful of His own." Thousands of hearts were left impressed by this wonderful interpretation.

The orchestra is the sure foundation upon which the chorus-effects rest. More is due to its members than any but musicians know, in the work of bearing up the chorus, to say nothing of their great responsibility as accompanists to the artists. Their own numbers were enthusiastically received.

The chorus was simply wonderful in great effects, with an increase of precision in attack and beauty of finish over last year's work. When one realizes that the Cincinnati chorus rehearses two years before giving a public concert, the results obtained here are little less than miraculous.

There were Bethel faces among the singers and we know that not one there regretted the patient

A SHORT SICKNESS

President of Mormon Church Breathes His Last

Had Been Leader Among His People For Over Sixty Years

Salt Lake City, Oct. 11.—Lorenzo Snow, fifth president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, better known as the Mormon church, died unexpectedly at his residence, the historic bee hive house, yesterday afternoon. The immediate cause of his death was hypostatic congestion, superinduced by aggravated bronchitis.

LORENZO SNOW.

President Snow's death caused a shock to the entire community, and is deeply deplored. He was regarded as a broad minded man who desired the upbuilding of Utah as well as the progress of the Mormon church.

President Snow's death dissolves the first presidency, of which he was the head, his two counselors being Joseph Smith and Rudger Clawson. Until his successor shall be chosen, which may not be until the annual conference next April, the leadership of the church will devolve upon the council of 12 apostles, of which body Mr. Smith is the recognized head. Unless death should come to him in the meantime, Mr. Smith will be the next president of the church.

President Snow leaves a large family, the members being scattered throughout the world.

Lorenzo Snow was born in Mantua, O., April 3, 1814, and received a classical education at Oberlin college. He became a convert to Mormonism in 1853, and then immediately began proselyting. Since then he has been one of the most active and prominent members of the church organization. He has been on numerous foreign missions, the most important being that to Great Britain in 1840, where he became president of the London conference. In 1848, at the head of a train of 100 wagons, he made the overland trip from Illinois to the present site of Salt Lake City, and in all the work of founding and building up this city he was a leader.

For 30 years commencing with 1852, he was a member of the territorial legislature, chiefly as presiding officer of the upper house. In 1855 with 50 families, he founded and named Brigham City, in northern Utah, which was his home for many years. In 1889, during the agitation against the practice of polygamy, he was convicted of unlawful collaboration and sentenced to three terms of six months each, but later was released on a writ of habeas corpus. On Sept. 13, 1896, he was again president of the church in succession to Wilford Woodruff.

Fatal Gunning Trip
Brattleboro, Vt., Oct. 10.—Stephen Ellis, a barber, 55 years old, died last night from the effect of gunshot wounds sustained yesterday while returning from a hunting trip with Hiram Livingston. The shooting is believed to have been purely accidental, but both men are said to have been under the influence of liquor and Livingston has not yet given a clear story of the affair.

Crime Rampant at Nome
Port Townsend, Wash., Oct. 14.—Reports from Nome state that a reign of terror prevails at Nome. Hold-ups and robberies are of nightly occurrence. Men are being snatched and held in broad daylight when caught in lonely places. Snatch box robberies are frequent. Business houses have been entered and even women walking on the streets are made victims.

North Hero, Vt., Oct. 10.—The store and postoffice kept by James Dodge here was broken into and $150 worth of stamps and about $200 in money, besides considerable merchandise, was taken. SPANIARDS AT SANTIAGO

Was on May 27 That Schley Received His First Positive Notice
Washington, Oct. 14.—The Schley court of inquiry held but one session Saturday. Captain Chadwick concluded his testimony begun Friday and Lieutenant Commander Stanton, who served on the New York as an aide to Captain Chadwick as chief of staff for Admiral Sampson, and Lieutenant Twining, formerly of the Iowa, were introduced as new witnesses.

Commander Stanton's testimony dealt largely with despatches forwarded by Sampson to Schley, and while he was under examination Mr. Rayner outlined a contention on behalf of Schley to the effect that the despatch written May 27 was his first positive notice that the commander-in-chief had given him of the presence of the Spanish fleet in the harbor at Santiago.

Lieutenant Twining said in his testimony that while the flying squadron occupied a position of from three to five miles out from Cienfuegos during the daytime the distance was increased to from seven to nine miles at night. He was in charge of the eight-inch guns during the bombardment of the Cristobal Colon on May 31, and he said it was the shots from the American fleet fell short of the mark.

Near the close of the day's session Judge Advocate Lemly and Mr. Rayner became engaged in a controversy over the admissibility at that time of a chart showing the speed of the vessels of the flying squadron, and when Mr. Rayner spoke concerning the matter to be introduced the judge advocate took exception to its reception, saying Mr. Rayner's summary might be inaccurate, as other statements made by him, referring especially to the contents of documents presented, had been. Mr. Rayner resented the exception and replied to the effect that it were attended outside the courtroom he would say that it was false. Before court adjourned both Mr. Rayner and Captain Lemly made statements concerning the incident to the court and Admiral Dewey expressed the opinion that Captain Lemly's explanation should be satisfactory to Mr. Rayner.

Gave Reasonable Explanation
Boston, Oct. 12.—Although three men were wounded by bullets from his revolver during the strike of express teamsters recently, Charles W. Gibson was discharged in court yesterday. The hearing extended through three days and the government's witnesses differed materially in the condition of affairs around the express wagon at the time. Gibson claimed that he fired the first shot when he was assaulted in the wagon. The other shots were fired while he was in the unfriendly grasp of many men. Judge Adams thought this a reasonable explanation in view of the disagreement of the others.

Settles Retires From Active Duty
Washington, Oct. 10.—Notwithstanding yesterday marked an important turning point in the career of Rear Admiral Schley, being nothing less than the date of his transfer from the active to the retired list of the navy, he was in his accustomed seat within the railing of the Schley court of inquiry, and gave his usual attention to the proceedings of the court. FRAUDULENT DEALS

Said to Have Been Made by Member of a Bankrupt Firm

Boston, Oct. 12.—As an unexpected incident in the inquiry into the affairs of the late Ferdinand Abraham, head of the bankrupt firm of F. Abraham & Son, tobaccoists, in the United States district court yesterday, came the petition of Isaac Klous, one of the receivers, to place Yetta Abraham, the widow, in involuntarily bankruptcy as endorser of notes signed by the insolvent firm. Other persons have joined in the petition as well.

The receivers of the concern have reported that the insolvency is beyond hope, the liabilities reaching nearly $250,000, with assets of only about $40,000. As inquiry proceeds, some startling allegations are made, wholesale forgery being one of them. In consequence, creditors are anxious to know the condition of their securities. Several banking houses have tangible security in leaf tobacco, amber and meerschaum.

Leopold Abraham, the junior partner, just sent to an insane asylum, is said to have made the fraudulent deals, the alleged bad endorsements representing $125,000. The inquiry by the receivers has not progressed far enough to indicate future proceedings.

Middlebury, Vt., Oct. 10.—Besides holding the record of having performed the largest number of marriages among Vermont clergymen, Rev. Sedgwick W. Bidwell of this place has just had the unique experience of officiating for the fifth time at a wedding in which either the bride or the groom had participated. David Stone and Mrs. Velda Harrington appeared before Rev. Mr. Bidwell to be married. Each of the contracting parties had twice been married, and on each of the previous occasions Rev. Mr. Bidwell had officiated. They gave their age as 55 each. The clergyman is 92 years of age.

Mustn't Publish Out of Coins
Boston, Oct. 10.—At least one Boston school book publishing house is threatened with a considerable loss, owing to the action of the United States government in strictly enforcing the law against counterfeiting. The secret service has seized a consignment of primary arithmetics destined for the Philippines. On one page of these arithmetics there is a cut representing United States coins. Although the book having this cut has been in existence 12 years, the United States authorities have just decided that it is contrary to law.

Turkey's Underhand Work
Paris Oct. 14.—A despatch from Tunis, Tunisia, announces that a Turkish officer was arrested there on a charge of swindling and that an investigation conclusively proved that he received instructions from the Ottoman minister of war to organize a rising of the Arabs in South Algeria in the event of the rupture of diplomatic relations between France and Turkey resulting in a declaration of war. The incriminated officer is only one of several who were entrusted with the same mission.

National Affairs in Safe Hands
New York, Oct. 14.—Senator Lodge returned Saturday on the steamer St. Louis from a vacation abroad. Because of his intimacy with President Roosevelt he was besieged by those who sought to learn his views concerning the policy of the new administration. "With Theodore Roosevelt in the White House the country is in safe hands" was all that he could say regarding national affairs. "I have decided not to talk politics for the present."

McKinley's Head on Postal Cards
Washington, Oct. 10.—The postoffice department has decided to place the late President McKinley's head on the new issue of postal cards, which will appear shortly after Dec. 1 next. The design includes the year of birth and year of death immediately at the left and right respectively of the name of McKinley which will be directly under the head.

Tramped For Fame and Money
Philadelphia, Oct. 14.—The six days' go-as-you-please race came to an end Saturday night at 10:23, the survivors having raced 142 hours. George Tracy of Kinderhook, N. Y., finished first, covering 500 miles. A purse of $5500 was divided among the first eight pedestrians.

For Constitutional Amendment
New Haven, Oct. 10.—The complete returns show a majority for the constitutional convention at last Monday's election of 20,311; for the plurality amendment 35,341 and for the popular senate amendment of 26,193. Only 41 percent of a full vote was polled.

THE GENERAL'S WIFE

Jarlin was a very good looking fellow, captain in the Indian staff corps, and, as captains even in the staff corps sometimes do, thought more of himself than did anybody else.

When home on leave, he met the prettiest, daintiest little girl, and for once, finding some one whom he could regard as better than himself he forgot Jarlin for a while and was genuinely nice. He married her, and they went out to India. Long before five years had passed and not long after he discovered he was the father of a child as pretty as her mother the old self esteem had deserted itself, and he thought it quite natural, quite within the proper course of things, that he should have one of the sweetest women in India for his wife and one of the prettiest little cherubs as his child.

Everything went well until they came to stay at the Annexe, Bombay, just prior to his proceeding to Seemderabad as deputy assistant adjutant general. Then it was that Peach of the bank saw her sitting alone at table awaiting the arrival of her liege lord. Of course Peach did not then know she had a liege lord. The idea did not enter his head. He only saw a vision in the most picturesque of pink, and it was done. Their eyes met, and the expression on his face brought a half smile to her own as she glanced away.

But in that moment she had seen something manly and frank in his countenance which she admired. Added to this there was the natural pleasure all women have in winning admiration. There was no one to talk to, and she looked again at Peach.

Jarlin came down to dinner full of himself, as usual, and therefore had not time to see what was going on. If he had, the idea of a civilian, who was not even one of the civil service "heavenly borns," coming between himself and his wife would have appeared too ridiculous to be worthy of consideration.

Had Peach known she was married he might probably have saved himself earlier. But he persuaded himself that the man by her side was just a friend.

By the time he had got to an examination of her fingers from a distance and saw the wedding ring it was too late. He was already in love. Though she did not know it just then, so was she.

A few days went by, and they were introduced. Jarlin did not give Peach much thought. He was glad his wife had company. It saved him the trouble of extra consideration. So he played unconsciously for his own ruin and the ruin of two others.

It was a shock to the young lover when he found there was a child, but he took that into his calculations also and went drifting toward the catnap, blindly indifferent to everything but the intense happiness of his frequent tete-a-tetes with the woman who seemed to him now to be a necessity of his existence.

Then things reached a climax. It was after dinner. They were sitting out on the veranda, with the moon and the stars above. In the distance the waves could be heard on the shore, the sound borne gently on the breeze that stirred the stately palms near by.

They were very close to each other. The perfume of her hair intoxicated him. They never knew how it happened, but presently they were sitting, his arm around her, her head resting on his breast. The world was forgotten. The moon beamed serenely down upon their happiness. In its light her face seemed like the face of an angel. He bent down and kissed it.

That was the awakening. Then, and not till then, they realized the horror of it all. Silently she wept. He knew talked fast and fervently. He knew the world, that young man, more of it than most people would have thought he knew, and he knew what may happen when a married woman gives herself to the man who loves her and is not her husband.

He was at the great crossroads, and he was aware of it, for by the light of his conscience he beheld the signposts. The wild horses of his passion sought to drag him madly down the one that leads to divorce or elopement and misery. So, like a man, he seized the reins more firmly, and, though it nearly rent him in pieces to do so, he mastered them; the damage was done.

Solemnly—very solemnly—and quietly they talked the matter over between them. They looked at things as they were, stepped aside and looked at themselves as the world would look at them and Jarlin and the little one. And the religious instincts of a woman came to help her, enshroued by the problems that beat us all.

When the bell of the old cathedral had ceased ringing for early service next morning, she was there. Peach changed his quarters, and, according to compact, they never saw each other to speak to again.

Promotion in these days is rapid. Jarlin had influence and rose to distinction, a generalship of some sort. Wherever he has been stationed no one has been able to say a bad word about Mrs. Jarlin, not even the women. When he entertained—and people regard the sweet, devoted little woman who is his wife—no one would ever guess she had passed through the shadow of a awful temptation.

Peach is a good fellow when not in a cynical, grumpy mood. He holds that marriage is too risky a lottery to take tickets for. The wrong people, he declares, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred are joined together in holy matrimony "for worse." In private, when he gets out of sorts and discontented, he will pull out the photograph of a very pretty girl and mutter as he regards it:

"Peach, you were a fool!"

But he does not really believe it. As she said, it was all for the best.—Black and White.

CONDENSED STORIES.

Bird Helped Seton-Thompson in the Painting of His House.

"The author of 'Wild Animals I Have Known' has a gleeful way of wrecking conventionality," writes Myra Emmons, who describes a day in the woods with Ernest Seton-Thompson in 'The Ladies' Home Journal,' "with some unexpected, boyish, utterly frank, natural and human word, look or prank. When we had finished luncheon on Ab's rock, he went to see how the painters were progressing on his new house."

"Those window frames must be a light peacock blue on the outside," he instructed them. The head painter demurred. He could not mix such a color.

"If I mix it, you can copy it, can't you?" asked the naturalist.

"Oh, yes."

"Then bring your colors."

"In a few minutes he was blending yellow, blue and green in a masterly way and trying the effect on a piece of board. Suddenly he looked up, laughed and went on painting."

"Did you hear the blue jay?" he asked. "As I hit the right shade he said: 'Bl-oo! Bl-oo! That's it! That's it!'"

The Student's Pipe.

A story was told the other night by a friend of United States Ambassador Choate concerning that statesman and jurist's encounter with a young college man years ago, says the New York Times. Mr. Choate had gone to New Haven to witness one of the famous varsity boat races between Yale and Harvard, and was returning to the city alone when he was approached in the car by a Yale student, who was brimming over with enthusiasm and smoking a huge pipe. The loquacious student sat himself down beside the lawyer, and recalled to him the fact that he (Mr. Choate) was an old friend of his (the student's) father. The older man acknowledged the acquaintance with pleasure and spoke a few kindly words, when he was interrupted by the loquacious student, who talked on and on without rest, puffing on his huge pipe and blowing the smoke continually into the other's face. The lawyer coughed and choked violently over the fumes, and then put his eyes on the pipe and kept them there. The student noticed this finally and, mistaking the look for one of admiration for the pipe, removed it from his mouth and gazed at it lovingly.

"A birthday present," said the owner, proudly regarding the reeking bowl.

"Indeed!" said the lawyer quietly, suppressing a cough. "I had no idea you were so old."

There was a laugh all over the car, and the college man finally withdrew, taking the ancient pipe with him.

The "Idiot" Got Lost.

It is said that when President Polk visited Boston he was impressively received at Faneuil Hall market. The clerk walked in front of him down the length of the market announcing in loud tones: "Make way, gentlemen, for the president of the United States—the president

The Story of a Woman's Suffering.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I began the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was suffering terribly. At times the pain was almost more than I could stand. My heart would nearly stop beating and I would get cold and numb."

your medicine."—MRS. CARRIE BELLVILLE, Ludington, Mich.

The record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is written in thousands of such letters as Mrs. Bellville's. When during its whole career of thirty years no physician has to our knowledge criticised it in their practice, should you, who know less about medicine than they, say, "Oh, I do not believe it is any good?"

Mrs. Pinkham advises women free of charge. Her address is Lynn, Mass. No woman knows the truth about women's ills as thoroughly as Mrs. Pinkham, and no medicine in the world has done so much good as of the United States! Fellow citizens, make room!" The chief had stepped into one of the stalls to look at some game, when the clerk turned round and, finding himself alone, suddenly changed his tone and exclaimed: "My gracious! Where has that darned idiot got to?"

A Compromise.

Miss Violet Brook-Hunt was aboard a transport en route to South Africa when a soldier going to the war asked her if she would write to his wife for him. She did so, and all went well till he came to the ending. "Here I'm stumped," he said frankly. "Your loving husband," was suggested. "Isn't that laying it on a bit too thick?" he asked. In the end he accepted "Very affectionate husband" as a compromise and cheerfully added a row of crosses.

Japanese Children.

A Japanese child 3 years old can swim like a fish, and often children who will not learn of their own accord are repeatedly thrown overboard until they become expert swimmers. In the harbor children seem to be perpetually tumbling overboard, but the mothers deliberately pick them out of the water and, cuffing them a little, go on with their work. It is really astonishing at what age these boys and girls will learn to swim. A boat 20 feet long most adroitly managed by three children, all under 7 years of age, is no uncommon sight.

The Striking Part.

Jerrold all his life long bitterly protested against the fashion of translating and adapting, which excluded the work of native writers and gave a reputation to men for work which they had not originated. Talking once with Mr. Planché, a noted adapter of plays, on this question, Planché insisted that some of his characters were original. "Don't you remember," he said, "my baroness in 'Ask No Questions?'" "Yes, indeed, I don't think I ever saw a piece of yours without being struck by your barrenness," was the reply.

Before Marriage and After.

Dr. Temple, the archbishop of Canterbury, is a notable personage about whom many good stories have been related. Some years ago a young curate seeking to be licensed was bidden by Dr. Temple to read a few verses of the Bible in order that his fitness for conducting public worship might be judged.

"Not loud enough," was the criticism of the bishop when the young man had finished.

"Oh, I'm sorry to hear that, my lord," replied the curate. "A lady in the church yesterday told me I could be heard most plainly all over."

"Ah! Are you engaged?" suddenly asked Dr. Temple.

"Yes, my lord."

The bishop smiled grimly and said: "Now listen to me, young man. While you are engaged don't believe everything the lady tells you, but, if she added with a deep chuckle, 'after you are married believe every word she says.'—London Truth.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

Lieutenant Vanderbilt.
Young Cornelius Vanderbilt, the third to bear the name so closely interwoven in the history of railroading and big financial schemes in this country, has been elected a second lieutenant in Company G of the Twelfth regiment,
N. G. S. N. Y. It is not doubted that Mr. Vanderbilt will successfully pass the examinations required before he can qualify.

There is a story current that a ten-tenancy is a stepping stone upon which

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT.
Young Vanderbilt will not tarry long—that it is intended soon to make him a captain.

It will be remembered that a few years ago Cornelius Vanderbilt, who was the eldest son of his father, was set aside in the latter's will because of his marriage to Miss Grace Wilson and that Alfred G., the second son, was made heir to the greater part of the property of their father.

The Farmer's Boy and Successor.

A banker, a lawyer and a preacher sat in a parlor car on the Hudson River railroad, enjoying the beauty of a central New York landscape after a June rain. "On that farm," said the banker, pointing out of the car window, "44
years ago Dr. James F. McKimmon, then a farmer's boy, tended a sick sheep. He was skillful, gentle and patient. The suffering animal got well.
There were vague dreams of another life, of study and struggle, on his mind, and the young man borrowed some money the following autumn and came to New York. Eleven years ago he was graduated at the Columbia Medical college, after three years of work and rec-tation from 7 a. m. until 11 p. m., study until 1 a. m. and as scant time for eating as for sleeping. In six weeks after graduation he was supporting himself examining applicants for insurance in an industrial company. In five years he was able to study a specialty in the treatment of the throat and ear. He is making $25,000 a year now and works just as hard as he ever did. He is one instance of the farmer's boy who comes to the city and conquers fame and fortune, but there are not so many now as there used to be."

The Owner of Cresceus.

The greatest of all horses is Cresceus, who in a square trot against time has gone a mile in 2:02 1/4 and shut out the former champion, The Abbot, in a second heat, the first heat, which is a record, being made in 2:03 1/4. The owner of Cresceus shares with the great horse the honors of the day in the horse world. George H. Ketcham, who

GEORGE H. KETCHAM.
bred, reared and drives Cresceus, is a resident of Toledo and is said to be a millionaire. Mr. Ketcham always drives Cresceus, whether he goes against time or against other horses, and he is credited with a fondness for the great horse that is characteristic of the successful breeder and trainer.

Von Walderssee's Welcome.
On the arrival of Field Marshal Count von Walderssee at Homburg Em-perors William and the Crown Prince Frederick William met him at the railway station.

When Count von Walderssee alighted from the railway carriage, the Kaiser hurried forward and embraced him.
He also kissed the count on both cheeks. The party then drove to the schloss, where the emperor and Field Marshal von Walderssee had a long conversation. Count von Walderssee was presented to Empress Augusta Victoria.

Blood.

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high, we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain, in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits,
no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

A Fortunate Defect.

In the "Reminiscences" of Henry Angelo is set down the history of M. Liviez, a Frenchman who married an English wife and took up his residence in London. The story of his courtship is at once romantic and funny.

One Sunday the gentleman went to church and found himself seated on a line with a remarkably handsome woman. The aisle was between them, but so beautiful was she that, having glanced at her once, M. Liviez could not refrain from looking again. Then, to his delight, he found that she was looking at him.

At intervals during the service he found her glance turned his way, and as she seemed to be a lady of proper and devout behavior he could not help thinking that such an impropriety meant an overwhelming interest in him.

He followed her home, and having found out where she lived obtained an introduction to her through common acquaintances.
Strange to say, it was not until they were actually engaged to be married that he gently reminded her of having looked at him in church.
Then he discovered that she had never seen him at all. She had been looking at the pulpit all the time, and he had not guessed it.
For—the lady squinted.

A WORTHY SUCCESSOR.
"Something New Under the Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalants and drugs in paste form.
Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalants have eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH by removing the cause, stopping the discharges and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the affected parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to perfect its use.

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH cure ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve Hay Fever or Cold in the Head.

CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the distinguished expert regarding the discussion of your case without cost, beyond the price of "SNUFFLES" the "Guaranteed Catarrh Cure."

FOR THE CHILDREN

Catching a Swallow.

It was a warm evening near the close of summer when papa and Fred went out for a stroll in the meadow to watch Rover, grandpapa's shepherd dog, drive the cows up the long lane from the pasture to be milked. The weather had been dry and fine for several days, and all the tiny insects that are found in such numbers in the country were flying near the ground, where the air was warmest. The air seemed to be thick with them.

Circling in and out after the flies, bugs and midges were hundreds of swallows whose nests were fastened in long rows beneath the eaves of grandpapa's barn. Because the insects were down near the ground the swallows flew there, too, for they were out getting their supper. Each pretty bird had its mouth wide open as it swept swiftly about. Every second or two their bills would close with a snap as they seized and swallowed a mosquito or a little unsuspecting gnat, still keeping on the wing.

Papa and Fred forgot Rover and the cows as they watched them. The swallows flew so close that one's wing brushed Fred's ear, and another saved himself from flying squarely into papa's face only by making a quick, upward turn.

"Once when I was a little boy and lived here in the country," said papa, "I came out into this same meadow just at sundown, and what do you think? I caught a swallow. How do you suppose I did it?"

"I don't know," said Fred, greatly interested. "How?"

"Well," said papa, "the swallows were flying just as they are now, almost bumping against me. So I took off my hat and waited—like this—and when one came near—see!—I made a swoop with my hat—so—and—why," said papa, much astonished, "I've got one now!" His face showed more astonishment than Fred's.

Fred danced about in a circle while papa gently thrust his other hand into the hat and took out the poor, trembling little bird.

"Have you hurt him, papa?" asked Fred, his tender heart stirred to sympathy at the prisoner's plight.

"No," said papa, looking half ashamed; "I don't think so, and really, my boy, I didn't mean to catch him. I was as much surprised as he was, I am sure. It only happened once before in all my life. How strange that this one should fly into my hat as I was telling you about the other! Maybe he's the great-grand-son of the first one I caught."

He showed Fred the beautiful purple head and shoulders of the little captive, and each stroked him gently with one finger.

Then papa opened his hand. For a second or two the swallow sat perfectly still on the palm, not knowing he was free. Suddenly he seemed to discover that no one was holding him, and, with a twitter, he darted away and was lost to sight among his countless companions in the air.—Youth's Companion.

McGovern's Advice to Boys.

Terry McGovern, a pugilist of some note, gives in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch some instructions to boys who would be strong. He says:

My first instructions to the boy who would be strong are to place his feet tightly together, take a long breath and while inhaling as much pure air in one breath as his lungs will hold slowly move the elbows upward until they are on a line with the shoulders.

Next raise the arms clear above the head, bringing them down slowly until the arms touch the hips.

While going through this exercise the entire body is kept under a high nervous tension, with every muscle rigid. This movement brings all the muscles in the chest into play.

Twice a day he must go through these exercises, once in the morning before breakfast and in the afternoon about an hour after dinner.

His muscles must be hardened and his chest expanded before he is made to do any real hard work. This will come later.

He must drink no alcoholic liquors and mustn't use tobacco in any form. This almost goes without saying, of course.

My final instructions for the day to him are to take long walks after school and to swing his arms when walking as much as possible. This may not seem particularly graceful, but the swinging motion of the arms exercises the shoulder muscles, and it's not grace, but strength and health, we're after. When a boy gets these, he can be as graceful as he likes.

"A Daisy."

Recently a certain professor out west was lecturing on "Nature Studies in the Schools" and was endeavoring to impress the pleasure and importance of a close observance of nature. Speaking of flowers, he was exhibiting a daisy to the class, pointing out its beauties and reminding them that the dower and mankind were creatures of the Supreme Being. He added, by way of emphasis, "The Lord that made me made a daisy." "You bet he did," spoke up some one in the background, and it was not until the audience was on the verge of convulsions that the professor saw the point and yielded the platform to the next man on the programme.

A Moon Bath.

Last night I saw the silver moon; It was a pretty sight. It filled the street; it filled my room With such a shining light That I could see to go to bed Without the gas light overhead. I wish I had a silver moon— Each night the whole year through. I think 'twould make a child all good And clean and pure—don't you? After the bathtub big and white To take a bath in silver light? —Annie Willis McCullough.

TESTING OF A RIFLE

Causes the Instant Death of a Boy at Adams, Mass

Other News of Interest From Various Parts of New England States.

Adams, Mass., Oct. 14.—James L. Kearns, 15 years old, was accidentally killed yesterday by a ball from a rifle in the hands of James Dacy, Dacy, who is 35 years old, married, gave himself up to the police and will be arraigned on the charge of manslaughter. The shock of the accident has temporarily unbalanced his mind and his condition is pitiable.

Young Kearns and his brother Edward, 18 years old, left their home in company with Dacy to test a rifle, owned by Dacy, which Edward thought of purchasing.

They went to East Hoosier street, where they fired several times at a target. Then they prepared another target and Dacy loaded the rifle with a 22-calibre bullet preparatory to handing it to James Kearns for the first shot, when in some manner the weapon was discharged.

The bullet struck Edward Kearns in the muscles of the right arm, between the shoulder and elbow, entering a deep gash, then glanced and struck James Kearns, who was standing just behind Edward, on the chin, leaving a slight mark, then taking a downward course and passing through his lung.

The lad died instantly. Medical examiner Brown was called and his report will be that death was due to accident.

Will Give Decision Next Thursday

Boston, Oct. 14.—Rev. Dr. Lorimer, pastor of the Tremont Temple Baptist church, announced yesterday that he would give his decision in regard to accepting a call from the Madison Avenue Baptist church next Thursday. The sum of $5000 was yesterday added to the $30,000 already raised toward the fund of $100,000 with which to reduce the debt of the church. The securing of which latter amount, it is claimed, will have great influence in determining Dr. Lorimer's decision.

Sequel to Spectacular Marriage

Ellsworth, Me., Oct. 14.—Richard H. Paine of Eden, aged 73, asked for a divorce from his wife, who is 60. The petition was contested, but the decree for the libellant was granted Saturday, and a cross-libel of the wife was withdrawn. Both applicants were based on statutory grounds. The couple were married in front of the grand stand as one of the attractions at the Hancock county fair seven years ago.

One of Radcliffe's Founders

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 12.—Professor James Greenough, until April, 1901, one of the faculty of Harvard college, died yesterday of heart failure. Captain Paul says that McNeil and Morrisey went astray at 6 o'clock last Friday night on the south channel while tending trawls during a dense fog.

Accidentally Killed by Chum

Bangor, Me., Oct. 14.—By the accidental discharge of a shotgun at Frankfort, Frank Leonard, aged 16, was shot and instantly killed. The gun was carried by Thomas Caloon and the boys had just started out on a hunting expedition. One side of Leonard's skull was entirely shattered. A coroner's inquest was not deemed necessary.

Costly Malleous Mischief

Portland, Me., Oct. 14.—Nearly every plate glass window for a distance of four blocks on one side of Congress street has been practically ruined by vandals. A double edged glass cutter was used and the double edges were drawn across the panes from sash to sash. The value of the disfigured glass is estimated at more than $5000.

South Framingham, Mass., Oct. 14.—The First Parish Unitarian church of this place yesterday observed the 200th anniversary of its organization and ordination of its first pastor, Rev. John Swift, the event being signified by historical addresses by prominent Unitarians from different sections of the country.

Still Without a President

Springfield, Mass., Oct. 12.—The trustees of Williams college held their annual fall meeting yesterday, but the matter of filling the vacant presidency of the institution was not taken up. The meeting was adjourned to Nov. 3, when the question of the presidency will be considered.

Women Hurt in Car Collision

Somerset, N. H., Oct. 12.—A car on the Dover and Somerset trolley line ran into the rear of another car, which had stopped to let off passengers here yesterday and seriously injured Mrs. Jennie Pidgeon and Miss Bessie Joyce, two students of a business college in Dover.

Didn't Intend to Keep Money

Taunton, Mass., Oct. 9.—Alderman Simou Swig, who was charged with misappropriating funds for a children's excursion, was discharged from custody by Judge Fox yesterday. No intent to keep the money was shown and Swig had recently paid all the outstanding bills.

PROFESSIONAL EATERS.

A Peculiar Custom Observed by the Devil's Lake Sioux Indians.

One of the most striking customs of the past that are preserved by the Indians of today is found among the tribes of the Devil's Lake reservation in North Dakota. The supervisor of the Indian service gives the following account of this peculiar practice:

"From time immemorial the Devil's Lake Sioux have adhered to an old custom in regard to the treatment of a guest. According to their etiquette, it is the bounden duty of the host to supply his guest with all the food he may desire, and, as a rule, the apportionment set before the visiting Indian is much in excess of the capacity of a single man.

"But by the same custom the guest is obliged to eat all that is placed before him, else he greatly insults his entertainer. It was found that this practice would work a hardship, but instead of dispensing with the custom the Indian method of reasoning was applied, and what is known as the professional eater was brought to the front.

"While the guest is supposed to eat all that is placed before him, it serves the same purpose if his neighbor assists in devouring the bountiful repast, the main object being to have the plate clean when the meal is finished.

"It is not always practicable to depend upon a neighbor at table to assist in getting away with a large dinner, and in order to insure the final consumption of the allotted portion visiting Indians call upon these professional eaters, whose duty is to sit beside them through a meal and eat what the guest leaves.

"The professional eaters are never looked upon in the light of guests, but more as traveling companions with a particular duty to perform.

"These eaters receive from $1 to $2 and even $3 for each meal where they assist. It is stated by the agent at the Devil's Lake reservation that one of the professional eaters has been known to dispose of 17 pounds of beef at a sitting. That they are capable of eating an almost fabulous amount I myself can testify."

Overloaded With Accomplishments.

The insane desire of fond parents that their children shall "shine" in their studies and accomplishments is one topic vigorously dealt with by Edward Bok in his editorial in The Ladies' Home Journal. Regarding the girls' side of this widespread evil, he says: "There are parents who, not content with the studies which their daughters have to grapple with at school, load them down with a few special ones in the finer arts. I have in mind now several young girls between the precarious ages of 12 and 17, who, after they return from school, have an extra dose of painting, music or languages. 'But my daughter must know something of these things,' is the protest of the fond mother. 'She must be able to hold her own with other girls of her set.' Of course the girl at this tender age, with such a mental load, soon goes to pieces. She becomes nervous, listless and nervous, and then the mother wonders why. To build her up everything under the sun is tried, except a lessening of mental work and the unnatural strain upon the nervous system. The girl develops into what? A bundle of nerves, physical vitality sapped almost to the last degree. And in this condition she enters the marriage state! And yet we wonder why there are so few women who are solitary free from organic troubles. Is it so inexplicable?"

Eight Hundred Thousand

Sufferers From Kidney Trouble Cured This Year by

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy Sample Bottle Free.

Thousands who have written for one of the free trial bottles of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy have it and their lives saved by a postal card. They got the trial bottle, and it proved to them that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was the only real cure for diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Bladder and Blood, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Chronic Constipation and the sicknesses peculiar to women. They bought a large sized bottle of their druggists and it benefited or cured them (the above is not an idle statement, but the result of careful investigation).

You can do the same thing. If you are in doubt as to whether you have trouble with your Kidneys or Bladder, put some of your urine in a glass tumbler and let it stand 24 hours; if it has a sediment, or a milky, cloudy appearance, if it isropy or stringy, pale or discolored, you should lose no time in taking Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy; it can be had of all druggists at $1.00 a large bottle, or six bottles for $5.00. It is without question the surest medicine of the age to put a stop to such dangerous symptoms as pain in the back, a frequent desire to urinate, especially at night, scalding burning pain in passing water, inability to hold urine and all the unpleasant and dangerous effects produced on the system by the use of whiskey and beer.

Send your full name and address to the Dr. David Kennedy Corporation, Rondout, N. Y., and be sure to mention this paper when a trial bottle, with pamphlet of valuable medical advice, will be mailed to you absolutely free. The publishers of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this liberal offer.

The Rev. C. F. Wells, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. DISPLAY OF LOOT

Taken From Houses In and Around Boston

Capture of Thieves Who Have Been Operating on Extensive Scale

Boston, Oct. 14.—Stolen property, the proceeds of recent robberies in Boston and nearby cities, and valued at $2500, was found yesterday by Boston police inspectors in rooms at 11 Boylston place, occupied by a quartet of self-confessed crooks who were placed under arrest Saturday evening.

The prisoners are Herbert S. Dudley, 24, and Mrs. Annie Dudley 27, his wife, of 11 Boylston place; Albert Reynolds, 22, of Cleveland, and Frank P. Gordon 20, of Utica, N. Y. Mrs. Dudley, the others say, took no part in the robberies, but disposed of some of the plunder.

There was such a weight of evidence against them that the men made confessions. They could not give an accurate account of all burglaries committed, but the lowest estimate made by them was 40.

In their confession the men told Chief Watis that they had been operating almost every night. Their method was to ring door bells and if the occupants were away they would pry open windows and doors with a chisel and loot the place. In almost every instance they say their work was done in the early evening. A chisel, two revolvers and a dark lantern were found in the rooms, while the stolen property included almost every article to be found in a well furnished home, with the exception of heavy furniture.

Nearly all the pawnbrokers in Boston will be summoned to police headquarters to look at the prisoners for the purpose of identifying them as men who have sold stolen property to them.

All of the prisoners deny having been arrested before and so far as the Boston police know they never have been.

The display of recovered loot is considered the greatest since the arrest of the famous Barrett and Chaffee burglars.

Dudley said that lots of the stuff had been sold, and that from jewelry with diamonds in it the stones had been taken out and sold. He said sometimes he would take the best of the goods gathered in and make a price on it and buy out shares held by Reynolds and Gordon. He would make them think he sold it, but would hide it until he got good money for it.

After Dudley told how he belonged in Boston and that he had been carrying on the work for four months, he was taken from the room. The others were brought in, one by one, and they told the same story. When told that Dudley had given up they were very much down hearted.

The attempt to locate the men who were causing trouble began two months ago, when the police were told that a number of persons living in Boston were concerned in breaks in several nearby towns.

These persons were not located, but within a short time quantities of goods reported stolen weeks before began to appear in the pawn shops. Then by shadowing the men who were selling goods the rooms of Dudley were located. The men were taken on suspicion and then the police watched 11 Boylston place all Saturday night, until after they saw Mrs. Dudley go in. Chief Watis headed the raid and everybody interested had a big surprise.

In a Hurry.

Mine Host—Hi, mister, you're going wrong! This is the way into the hotel. That's only the pigsty!

Laughter.

He laughed as we led him away to the jail. "I know how to suffer!" cried he. But when we conducted him, not to a dark dungeon merely, as he had doubtless expected, but to a hideous cozy corner, with 10,000 sofa pillows in it, his fortitude deserted him.

"Mercy!" he implored and fell upon his knees. "It was our turn to laugh now as we thrust him in there."—Detroit Journal.

OLD FAVORITES.

Of Blessed Memory.

I often wonder mother how to creep Up to the garret where a cupboard stands And sit upon the dusty floor and weep, Holding a baby's dresses in her hands.

I often wonder grandma loves to sit Alone where hangs a picture on the wall— A handsome face across whose features flit The phantoms of a love she would recall.

I wonder, too, that sister, pale and sad, Waits at the gate and, waiting, seems to hear The footfalls of the brave, heroic lad Who never more may woo her waiting there.

ENVOI.

The little lips in voiceless death are sealed; The laughing squire seeks now a lasting sleep; The lover's bones bleach on a battlefield; The broken hearted women live to weep.

"This is a good year for peaches," said the huckster. "If you'll buy 'em by the basket, ma'am, you'll find the price isn't high at all."

"No," said Mrs. Hauskeep, "but the bottom of the basket is as high as ever."—Philadelphia Press.

All who listened to Miss Moore were not only pleased with the manner with which she treated her subject, but were quite fascinated with her earnestness and ease of manner. Tuesday morning, Miss Moore spoke to the children in the Brick building in a most interesting and charming manner. Her theme is department work done by the young ladies of the W. C. T. U. and Loyalty Temperance Legion. As a result of her efforts, thirteen young ladies and one young gentleman signed the pledge and now wear the white ribbon. It is hoped the society may soon include many more of our young people.
